THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Deacon & Peterson, Publishers.
NUMBER SIXTY-SIX SOUTH THIRD ST.

Two Dollars Per Annum, In Advance.
THREE DOLLARS IF NOT PAID IN ADVANCE.

EDMUND DEACON, HENRY PETERSON, } EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

A FAMILY NEWSPAPER: NEUTRAL IN POLITICS.

CLUBS.—FOR TERMS TO CLUBS, SEE PROSPECTUS ON THIRD PAGE.

DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, THE COMMERCIAL INTEREST, SCIENCE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

VOLUME XXX. PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1850. WHOLE NO. 1532.

Choice Poetry.

LINES FOR MUSIC.

'Twas in the glad season
When roses are sweet,
I fled to the forest
Thy snow, timid feet.
Then those roses blushed deeper
Thy forehead of snow;
Low murmured the waters,
Thy voice was more low;
Yet heard I each accent,
Each faint whispered tone
That bade me then hail thee
My chosen—my own.
The blackbird was trilling
His blithe carol nigh,
When seals the vast business
Thou met thou and I!

Time passed—we were parted,
But o'er the sea roam
In grief or in gladness
My heart unconvered home.
In sleep I beheld thee,
And waking, my thought
Still dwelt on the dreaming
That dear vision brought
And ever I spoke of
With doubt's weary pain—
Or, tuned and long severed,
When meet we again?
The bird, silent in winter
In bright carol sings,
And 'mongst the last business
Yet meet thou and I?

ELLEN C——

Original Novelet.

THE BAYMOUNTS.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, BY MISS LESLIE, AUTHOR OF "MRS. WASHINGTON POTTS," "NO, SIR," &c.

[Entered according to the Act of Congress, by Miss Leslie, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.]

PART FIRST.

In a certain township of a certain county of a certain State, whose rather lengthy name begins with a P and ends with an A, there lived a family that answered to the application of Baymount. Many Americans know something about their grandfathers, but the Baymounts (in their pride in antiquity) had some knowledge of even a great grandsire. Tradition said that he came out from Europe about the time of William Penn's Quaker—but of course, full well them, and memorizing into small words them the back of his letter, he grasped on the indulgence of the desire. So as he foreboded to run away, and go in safe before the coast, it was thought best that a midshipman's warlord should be obtained for him. His first voyage included the circumnavigation of the globe.

Randal Baymount had just completed his twenty first year, when having recently arrived from a cruise in the Mediterranean, he had hastily run home to Hallmark, to see his father and get some money; and as hastily ran back to New York, alleging that he could not be spared from the ship. One morning, about a fortnight after Randal's departure, the squire was sitting alone at breakfast, the sister, Mrs. Plumley, being absent on a visit to a married daughter in Chester County, when he was interrupted by the entrance of his confidential black boy (quite commonly called Jupe,) bringing a letter in his hand, and saying,

"I guess the here letter is from young master Randal—for him seal is marked with one of them eagle buttons that he wears on his coats—from their hearts he beauties!"

Squire Baymount eagerly opened the letter, and read as follows:

"Dear old fellow—As you are a pretty good sort of a father, and like to see every body happy, I hasten to inform you that I have ensured my felicity by taking to myself a wife in the person of Miss Julianne Vandeve. She is the loveliest creature under the sun, and her mother is a rich widow. It is true that for the present, we had to run away; the old lady being so absurd as to object to her marrying a midshipman, even though I am a passed one. But, of course she will come round after awhile; and be reconciled and forgiving.

"Meanwhile, as I have not exactly decided what other arrangements to make for my charming bride, I have concluded to pay you a visit at Hallmark, and give you an opportunity of seeing what a treasure I have promised for you in the shape of a daughter-in-law. I do not believe you will be able to part with her when I go to sea again. She is very young. I stole her from a boarding school—not a very difficult task, by the bye—as fourteen of her schoolmates assisted in helping her off, the secret of our plan having been entrusted to every one of them. Dear, kind girls! not to tell—I shall introduce them to the navy.

"As ever, [as my sweet Julianne says in French.

"Your loving son, RANDAL.

"At any time after the receipt of this letter you may begin to keep a bright look-out for us. Tell Aunt Plumley not to give herself too much trouble in her preparations."

Squire Baymount looked up and looked down; and put his lip, and knit his brows; and rubbed his hair several ways; and then resigned to the letter, to see if he had read it aright. Next he pushed back his chair, rose from the table, and walked the floor hard, while Jupe stood grinning and staring with the door in his hand; both to go till he knew what all this was about.

"God bad news, squire," said he, at last.

"Bad enough in all conscience. Go send Blondy to me."

Blondy was a very black cook; and in the absence of Mrs. Plumley she governed the household. She came as soon as she had finished her own breakfast, and rather soonet. The boy Jupe following her, but listening outside.

"Blondy," said the squire, irritably, "because they are always so well prepared to go to housekeeping."

"Lawa a mercy, I hope not. Any thing happened to your master Randal? Why squire, what in the name of sense is the matter—you seem to look every bow. Is master Randal dead, or drowned—and shall we all have to go in mourning?"

"No, he is not dead—but he's married," exclaimed the squire, vehemently—"he's not married!"

"Well, that's a good thing. It may help settle him, and make him leave off boarding in at the windows, running up the porch-posts, and scampering about the roof, just as if he was board a ship—and calling the dogs after him, tracing about with their muddy feet!"

"My son and his wife will be here directly—perhaps this day," continued the squire. "So you must prepare for them."

"Well, I ain't sorry for that. When Mrs. Plumley's away, company's scarce—that is, genuine company. And I like to have strange folks about; it keeps my hand in. Is the young lady pretty?"

"He says so."

"To be sure," resumed Blondy, "men folks ain't no judges of their own wives, neither way. My husband (that's dead and gone) could never see no beautitude in me, even when I had my white gownd on. But when do you say these young folks are to be inspected? How soon are they coming?"

"This evening, most likely. I shall think all day of nothing but them."

"Neither shall I, for I must continue and patch them up a proper sort of supper to begin with—such as won't disgrace the family, even though Mrs. Plumley is a thousand miles off. I have a fine toast of ham, for which he paid two shillings, four strings of beads and an iron kettle. At that time the greatest foreigner required in the Norman name of Beaumont; but as the neighborhood settled, the people, for some unknown reason (or more possibly, for no reason at all,) fell into a habit of calling it Baymount. The mistress of the family acquiescentarily held on to Beaumont long after the master had given it up as a hopeless case; he philosophically declaring that, in his opinion, the difference was not worth "the toss of a copper." And his younger brother, Duke, who had long followed the sea," (being called after the great Sir Harold,) averred that for his part, no other label the change, as there was certainly more sense in a boy than in a duke.

As is generally the case with first settlers, the Baymounts became great people in the settlement. And when the Revolution came off, all the men of them stepped out and fought for Congress—like nearly all the men of most other names. Now, at the period of which we are writing (not own times), the chief representatives of the ancient house of Beau or Baymount were the brothers; one called Boulter and the other Beverley. The first had been christened after his maternal grandsire. And the mother, having once visited Philadelphia, and once seen a play, the tragedy of the beauteous Belvidera, so much interested in the character of Beverley, as personated by Cooper, (then in his youthful days, and with all his manifold and unrivalled advantages of genius, voice and figure,) that she resolved on giving to her real son the same name borne by the unfortunate hero of that sad domestic drama. Perhaps it was the name of the elegant and fashionable gamester that rendered the younger son of the Baymounts naturally more genteel than his elder brother. Or perhaps because his mother petted him, and brought him up more delicately. Eventually, when both those young men became their own masters, Beverley sold his half of the paternal acres to his brother Boulter, went to Philadelphia and studied law, and afterwards returning to Hallmark, settled down there, practiced his profession, married a judge's daughter, became a magistrate, and was known ever after as Squire Baymount. His brother Boulter prided himself on being "a gentleman;" lived in the old stone farm-house, built by the founder of the family; farmed away with all his might, and married a farmer's daughter.

Squire Baymount erected for himself a showy white Lame mother, of the modern architecture so fashionable in our country, with a tin-roof, portico, treble windows, and a Chinese rust. There was also a one-story wing, in the Saracen style; this wing being the squire's office.

After the death of his wife, a widowed sister presided over Squire Baymount's establishment. Of his four children, one only had lived to grow up, a son, called Randal, who, like his great uncle Duke, had imbibed an early inclination for "a life on the ocean wave."

By the time he was sixteen, the lad had repeatedly declared that nit power, his inclin, and even his life, depended on the indulgence of the desire. So as he foreboded to run away, and go in safe before the coast, it was thought best that a midshipman's warlord should be obtained for him. His first voyage included the circumnavigation of the globe.

Randal Baymount had just completed his twenty first year, when having recently arrived from a cruise in the Mediterranean, he had hastily run home to Hallmark, to see his father and get some money; and as hastily ran back to New York, alleging that he could not be spared from the ship. One morning, about a fortnight after Randal's departure, the squire was sitting alone at breakfast, the sister, Mrs. Plumley, being absent on a visit to a married daughter in Chester County;

SATURDAY EVENING POST.

HENRY PETERSON, EDITOR.

Philadelphia:

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1850.

ALL THE CONTENTS OF THE POST ARE SET UP EXPRESSLY FOR IT, AND IT ALONE. IT IS NOT A MERE REPRINT OF A DAILY PAPER.

TERMS, &c.

The terms of the POST are $2 if paid in advance—$3, if not paid in advance. For $5 one copy is sent three years.

4 Copies,	- -	$5 00 Per Annum.
8 "	(and one to Agent, or the getter up of the Club,)	$10 00 "
13 "	(and one to Agent, or the getter up of the Club,)	$15 00 "
20 "	(and one to Agent, or the getter up of the Club,)	$20 00 "

Subscribers wishing their paper changed, will please give the name of the Post Office to be changed. Free, as well as the Post Office they wish it hereafter sent to.

All persons addressing letters to us should be careful to give the name of the State as well as of the town in which they live.

Post Masters or others sending for Clubs, would confer a favor by having them sent to one address when they can do so conveniently.

We trust our old friends, the Postmasters, will exert themselves and get up large Clubs for the Mammoth Post; or if they do not feel inclined to take advantage of our liberal offers themselves, that they will show our Prospectus to some other influential and responsible person who will be willing to do so. It must be remembered that "to induce to send the same on a first class paper, or on the cheapest and poorest of the small reprints."

NEXT YEAR'S CAMPAIGN.

First and foremost, Mrs. Southworth will be our exclusive contributor (with the exception of an occasional story in a Washington paper.) Mrs. Southworth is, in our opinion, decidedly the greatest female novelist of America; and, in many respects, she is superior to any other novelist in the country, of either sex. Her new story, to commence about the first of January next, will be entitled,

VIRGINIA AND MAGDALENE;

OR,

THE FOSTER SISTERS

A WINTER EVENING'S TALE.

In the intervals of Mrs. Southworth's Novelets, we shall publish shorter novelets and stories from the pens of other well-known writers. We have two now on hand, which shall be published as early as possible, viz.:

THE IRON HAND, by T. S. Arthur.

THE TEXAN HUNTSMAN, by C. W. Webber, author of "The Shot in the Eye," &c.

Reports of Lectures, the Cream of the Foreign Periodicals, Engravings, Congressional Reports, General News, Wit and Humor, &c., &c., shall be given as of old.

And as a guarantee for the Future, we point our readers, and the public at large, to our management of the Post in the Past. We know that we have never hesitated at any reasonable expenditure, to make the Post what it now is, the leading weekly of the country. And we are determined that our readers shall have the best original and selected matter that money and tact and industry can procure.

Shall we not have the active support of our numerous friends, in all sections of the county, as of old? We hope to double the number of our subscribers in a great many places, this coming season. A little activity on the part of our friends will do it, and incite us to renewed exertions on their behalf.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Our attention has been called to an article in "Scott's Weekly Paper" of last Saturday, in which the charge is made that unfair means have been resorted to by us, to injure the prospects of that paper.

It is sufficient for us to say, that the false and libellous nature of those charges, is only equalled by the weakness of the reasoning with which it is attempted to support them.

The proprietors of the Post never resort to unfair and deceptive means to promote the circulation of their paper. And as to their conduct towards their contemporaries, their motto is that of President Jackson towards France: "We ASK NOTHING BUT WHAT IS RIGHT, AND WILL SUBMIT TO NOTHING THAT IS WRONG."

OREGON LETTERS.

We regret to inform our readers that we recently received a letter from Professor Mansfield, of Bethany College, who had expected to visit Oregon, and furnish us with a series of letters descriptive of that new territory, saying that he had been compelled to abandon the design. He says: "Sickness prevents my going, and besides the Isthmus—my fourth in still bad, and my plans for the present frustrated."

As we had anticipated a very useful as well as interesting series of letters from Professor Mansfield, it is with much regret that we are necessitated to make this announcement.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The chief news from Europe is of a highly important character. A skirmish has taken place between the Prussian and Austrian troops, in which the former had drawn the first blood. The Prussians occupied the village of Fronefort upon which the Austrians advanced with their swords sheathed, but were at once fired upon, and several of their number wounded. The shots were returned, and the Prussians finally evacuated the place, carrying off their Wounded with them. France, England and Russia are said to view alarmed at the prospect of a general war—have offered their mediations. But, though it seems madness for either party to go to war, appearances are evidently against the probability of a long continuance of peace. The next steamships will probably bring information which will enable us to form more definite conclusions.

France has instructed her ministers at the Courts of Austria and Prussia, to announce that although France wishes to observe the strictest neutrality in the disputes of other nations, she could not but regard a war between those two nations as a European affair, and the mediations are desired to reconsider, with all the weight of their official position, against the right of either country to open the way to convulsions in Europe for interests which are either personal, or too slight not to make it incumbent on them to maintain pacific relations. In the meantime, a French army of observation, consisting of 50,000 troops, is to be organized on the North Eastern frontier.

Louis Napoleon has pleased all parties in France by his message. He avows his attachment to Liberty by the accession in its integrity, to the laws and Constitution of the Republic. If the Legislature power decides to revise the Constitution, it is well: if it does not, his duty is to see respected the laws as they are. The tone of this Message, and its welcome reception by the people, would seem to denote that all cleavage what true Republicanism requires, are spreading in France.

The English appear to be a little ashamed of the great amount of indignation they have wasted on the recent measures of the Pope. They have found out that there are only half a million Roman Catholics in England, and but 3,000,000 in all Ireland, Canada and America. Cardinal Wiseman, who has arrived in England, is also said to have declared that the whole scheme was submitted to be approved by the British Cabinet some time ago. We think that ultimately our English friends will see that they have acted a little too much before the drama, and calculated particularly to help Roman Catholicism, or to harm Protestantism. The excitement, however, still continues to be very great.

DWIGHT'S LECTURE.

We were not present at Mr. Dwight's lecture on Music, before the Mercantile Library Company, but we understand that hall the audience were half-asleep, and the other half laughing at those who had hard work to keep their eyes open. As the previous lectures had been rather exciting, perhaps Mr. Dwight thought the company needed a composing streak. If he did, he certainly attained his object.

By the way, we would remind lecturers in general, of a sensible remark of the author of Lacon: "If you cannot put fire into your compositions, you had better put your compositions into the fire."

A FABLE.

Not so many centuries ago as one might suppose, there was great rivalry among the beasts as to which was the most worthy of admiration. The horse, the elephant, and the lion, being the main competitors for public favor.

There was a great meeting held yearly of all the animals, at which those rival claims were decided; the animal which could get the most votes, being entitled to the chief place in the grand processions of the beasts—the others taking rank in proportion to the number of their adherents.

Now there was a donkey, which being ambitious, as donkeys often are, began to argue to himself the possibility of also becoming a candidate for public favor. "My form," said he to himself, "is certainly very graceful, my ears are not deficient in size, and as for my voice, certainly nothing could be more melodious than my bray. Only in size," thought he, "am I infirm—my shape, my ears, my bray, all are perfect—oh, that I were only as large as the horse, or the elephant; then would I carry all before me, in the great assembly of the beasts."

In this connoisseurs, the donkey bethought himself of an old fox, who was reputed to possess great wisdom, or, rather, cunning. He accordingly sought out the fox, and communicated to him the subject of his anxious meditations. The old fox heard him in silence, and then, with his paw to his nose, replied as follows:

"I agree with you fully, my amiable and sagacious friend, that your small size is the only obstacle in your way to becoming an object of great admiration among the beasts. Your shape is not inelegant, your ears are admirably calculated for hearing (or else size is no test), and your voice goes to the heart of every one like the peal of a trumpet. As to the defect you have mentioned, I think that can be remedied. There is a fountain in the woods that I can take you to, which will swell up any beast that drinks of it, to the size of an elephant, for the space of a whole week."

The donkey clapped his great hoofs together with delight. "Then all I have to do," said he, "is to drink of that fountain every week, and I shall always be as large as the elephant."

"Stop, stop, my good friend," said the fox, "if you were to keep yourself swelled up in that manner all the time, the probability would be that you would soon burst; and leave behind you a very bad odour. In fact, it is dangerous to do it even once, but, knowing your great anxiety to appear large, I thought I would suggest it."

"Well, even once will be sufficient," said the donkey; "I can swell myself up once, and get the votes of the beasts, and then I shall occupy a foremost place for the whole year."

"But," replied the fox, "are you not afraid that all the beasts will fall upon you, when you again appear in your original dimensions, and call you by names which it is unpleasant for even a donkey to hear?"

"Not in the least," said the donkey—"let them laugh that win—I shall no longer drag along at the tail of the public procession of the beasts—and, next year, you shall tell me some other way to circumvent them."

"Be it so," said the fox, "I perceive you are a very courageous animal—and a very silly one, too," added he, when the donkey got out of hearing.

The donkey accordingly carried his plan into execution—he drank of the black fountain, and swelled up to the size of the elephant as the fox had predicted. He also experienced very great pains, which the cunning fox had said nothing about. But the donkey hid himself in a secluded place, until the swelling operation was completed, when he felt very large, and comparatively easy.

There was great wonder, as may be supposed, when the ass, swelled up as large as an elephant, came awkwardly stalking into the assembly of the beasts. At first there was no emotion apparent but astonishment; but, before many minutes, the donkey raised his voice, and commenced to tell as one of the candidates for the election—and then the astonishment subsided into a universal titter.

At last an old lion, who had seen many things in his time, deliberately mounted the platform which he usually occupied when addressing the beasts, and spoke as follows:

"My friends, our brother, the donkey, is certainly an object of interest, if not of admiration. He appears to have grown very much in a very short period. Now, this growth may either be a genuine one, or it may result from his having imprudently drunk of the black fountain of Humbug, which many of us have seen in the woods. We recommend that, in the meantime, it be requested of the donkey to favor us with a specimen of his powers of braying."

SEQUEL.

When the grand assembly of the beasts again came together, the donkey had shrunk into his usual size—in truth, he seemed even a little leaner than usual; and great was the roar of the assembly as he came sneaking into their midst. Even the old lion could not help laughing.

The donkey, however, was not originally the least abashed—covering his confusion with a great show of indignation.

"You," brayed he at the old lion, "are the sole cause of my appearing in this shrivelled condition. If it had not been for your advice to the beasts, I should always have remained as large as the elephant. But you were envious of me. You did not want to see me closest leader among the animals. You pretended my election, and therefore I am reduced to my original size. But I will be revenged, I will appeal to the legal tribunals of the beasts for redress."

"My long-eared friend," replied the old lion, while the other beasts stood around laughing, "your return for your gifts to the fox is a little piece of advice. You are a very useful animal in your place, which I consider to be among your long-eared brethren. Even if you could make yourself without injury as large as the elephant, you still would not be an elephant, but only a very great donkey. Therefore I would, in future, the black waters of Humbug, the drinking of which will only cause you to be laughed at, instead of admired."

Whether the donkey profited by this judicious advice, we are unable to say.

JENNY LIND.

The second visit of Jenny Lind to Philadelphia, has been, we think, a more satisfactory one to all parties than the first. While there is an much less enthusiasm manifested, there is more of that deep and serious admiration which a woman like Jenny Lind must delight to inspire, and which it is equally pleasant on the part of generous natures to bestow.

And now that we have had the sweet singer of Sweden again and again, we consider her claims to preeminence, both as a woman and a singer, to be undeniable. There is no question as to the unequalled power and compass of her voice, and her marvellous command of it. No scene half the time above the necessity of taking breath, and, indeed, above most other human limitations.

"Lighted by the powerful ray
Of understated humanity."

The first Song, everywhere so rapturously received, has not been overpraised. The bright freedom of her spirit rushes into it gladly and completely, and her utterance of the bird's reply is exhilaratingly natural. But the greatest charm of all, we say it deliberately, is in the expression of her face, in her happy smile, breaking forth with a sudden magic light, and raining down sweetness. However great her triumphs, we trust that she will not be taken from us too late. We can see, by the lofty light of her brow, that no success, though it was the whole world's plaudits, could satisfy her soul, or give rest for more than a moment to the divine aspiration of a genius that is true to its mission.

The sad and favorite song of "Home, Sweet Home," was sung at several of the Concerts That, as well as the "Bird Song," was sung in English. Jenny's pronunciation is very good—having but sufficient of a foreign accent, to give it an additional charm. "Home, Sweet Home," was sung rather differently from the usual mode, with a gushing cheerfulness instead of a pensive sadness. The ornaments were few and of a simple and appropriate character; but the full, rich notes of her tones, the beautiful long cadences which lingered and floated on its harmonious waves, and the natural smile of the singer, fairly irresistible: the audience, and a repetition was always instantaneously called for.

The whole variety of entertainment from the Italian opera were sung, but they evidently did not give half as much pleasure, either to Jenny or her hearers, as the more simple and English songs.

The orchestral music of these concerts has been admirably executed. Signor Bellotti, has maintained his high reputation—the Terzolini Napoleonic, a composition expressing to the life the mad spirit of Irish jauntiness a troop of dancers, was sung one evening with great effect, by Allegrini, but, though active of Jenny Lind Concerts, have been the finest, by a great degree, of any we ever attended.

Fanny Meissner Cunningham or not Cunningham—A sale of useful and fancy articles, intended to aid the completion of this church edifice, will commence in the Upper Saloon of the Chinese Museum, on Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, at 3, P. M., and will continue at 10, A. M., on the three succeeding days.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

We lay the President's Message, entire, before our readers this week—a portion of it is in rather smaller type than we could have wished, but it will give our readers a sample of the eye-destroying stuff which some papers use almost altogether. We will give a short abstract of the Message, for the benefit of hasty readers:

The President holds that, while we may sympathize with other nations, it is our duty to "mind our own business." He does not use this classic phrase, however; probably because it did not occur to him. This part of the Message has a decided reference to Cuba. He says:

We should act towards other nations as we wish them to act towards us; and justice and conscience should form the rule of conduct between Governments, instead of mere power, self-interest, or the desire of aggrandizement.

Very good doctrine that, in our opinion.

The President says that the Constitution, as expounded by the Judiciary, will be his guide.

He gives Congress a hint that he is no anti-vetoman.

He considers it an especial duty to avoid encroaching upon the domestic affairs of the individual States.

He says he shall shrink from no responsibility in executing the laws.

He says that mistakes will necessarily occur in making appointments to office—but that he will turn out one of his own appointments for misbehaviour, as soon as any one else. (A veto allusion edict? as the Chinese say.)

All peace and sunshine in our foreign relations—we disposed to hurt nobody, and everybody afraid to touch us.

The difficulty with Portugal is all arranged. Mr. Clay's conduct is endorsed.

There is some hope that Peru can be induced to lower her export duty on Guano.

We have had much trouble with affairs in St. Domingo promised, in connection with other Governments.

Total receipts into Treasury, forty-seven millions—expenditures forty-three millions—public debt reduced about half-a-million.

A revision of the Tariff is advised. Not a "high," but a uniform, permanent Tariff recommended. Tremendous cheating under present system of ad valorem duties. Specific duties advised.

A Mint in California is recommended—stamp-ed and stamped gold bullion recommended to be received for Government dues.

An Agricultural Bureau is proposed—to have attached to it a competent Chemist and Mineralogist.

Recommends selling, instead of leasing, the gold lands of California.

A revision of the code of Naval Laws is advised—a "humane and effectual" system of discipline to be established.

A further reduction of postage is proposed. Inland letter postage to three cents the single letter when prepaid, and five cents when not prepaid. He also recommends that the prepaid rate shall be reduced to two cents whenever the revenues of the Department, after the reduction, shall exceed its expenditures by more than five per cent. for two consecutive years; that the postage upon California and other letters sent by our ocean steamers shall be much reduced; and that the rates of postage on newspapers, pamphlets, periodicals, and other printed matter shall be modified, and some reduction thereon made.

Internal improvements are justified as Constitutional. Fresh water considered as appropriate a subject of legislation as salt water. Dead sea not touched upon.

A Commission to hear and settle all private claims against the United States, recommended to be established. Counsel to be provided to represent and protect the Government.

The District of Columbia is recommended to the protection of Congress. An abundant supply of pure water much needed. Nothing said about the propriety of allowing a vote to flow daily through both halls of Congress.

The President approves the measures passed at the last session of Congress, relative to the Slavery question, and regards them as a "final settlement" of the agitation. They were adopted in a spirit of conciliation, and for the purpose of conciliation. I believe that a great majority of our fellow-citizens sympathize in that spirit, and that purpose, and in the main approve, and are prepared, in all respects, to sustain these enactments.

The President closes his message, by invoking Congress to join him in humble and devout thanks to the Great Ruler of nations, for the multiplied blessings which he has graciously bestowed upon us. Peace, which, so often visible in our borders, has stayed the pestilence, saved us from foreign wars and domestic disturbances, and scattered plenty throughout the land.

A NEW SPIRIT.

It is encouraging to see the spirit now manifested in the city of Philadelphia with regard to both our domestic and foreign commerce. Some years ago, we were almost ashamed to call ourself a Philadelphian—Boston and New York seemed to be going ahead of us with such rapid strides. But a change has come over the spirit of our dream—or, rather, Philadelphia is no longer dreaming at all, but wide awake, and resolved to take that position to which by the laws of nature she is entitled. The Central Railroad has had to answer the call of her shrivelled condition. If it had not been for your advice to the beasts, I should always have remained as large as the elephant. But you were envious of me. You did not want to see me closest leader among the animals. You pretended my election, and therefore I am reduced to my original size. But I will be revenged, I will appeal to the legal tribunals of the beasts for redress."

"My long-eared friend," replied the old lion, while the other beasts stood around laughing, "your return for your gifts to the fox is a little piece of advice. You are a very useful animal in your place, which I consider to be among your long-eared brethren. Even if you could make yourself without injury as large as the elephant, you still would not be an elephant, but only a very great donkey. Therefore I would, in future, the black waters of Humbug, the drinking of which will only cause you to be laughed at, instead of admired."

Whether the donkey profited by this judicious advice, we are unable to say.

JENNY LIND.

The second visit of Jenny Lind to Philadelphia, has been, we think, a more satisfactory one to all parties than the first. While there is an much less enthusiasm manifested, there is more of that deep and serious admiration which a woman like Jenny Lind must delight to inspire, and which it is equally pleasant on the part of generous natures to bestow.

And now that we have had the sweet singer of Sweden again and again, we consider her claims to preeminence, both as a woman and a singer, to be undeniable. There is no question as to the unequalled power and compass of her voice, and her marvellous command of it. No scene half the time above the necessity of taking breath, and, indeed, above most other human limitations.

"Lighted by the powerful ray
Of understated humanity."

The first Song, everywhere so rapturously received, has not been overpraised. The bright freedom of her spirit rushes into it gladly and completely, and her utterance of the bird's reply is exhilaratingly natural. But the greatest charm of all, we say it deliberately, is in the expression of her face, in her happy smile, breaking forth with a sudden magic light, and raining down sweetness. However great her triumphs, we trust that she will not be taken from us too late. We can see, by the lofty light of her brow, that no success, though it was the whole world's plaudits, could satisfy her soul, or give rest for more than a moment to the divine aspiration of a genius that is true to its mission.

The sad and favorite song of "Home, Sweet Home," was sung at several of the Concerts That, as well as the "Bird Song," was sung in English. Jenny's pronunciation is very good—having but sufficient of a foreign accent, to give it an additional charm. "Home, Sweet Home," was sung rather differently from the usual mode, with a gushing cheerfulness instead of a pensive sadness. The ornaments were few and of a simple and appropriate character; but the full, rich notes of her tones, the beautiful long cadences which lingered and floated on its harmonious waves, and the natural smile of the singer, fairly irresistible: the audience, and a repetition was always instantaneously called for.

The whole variety of entertainment from the Italian opera were sung, but they evidently did not give half as much pleasure, either to Jenny or her hearers, as the more simple and English songs.

The orchestral music of these concerts has been admirably executed. Signor Bellotti, has maintained his high reputation—the Terzolini Napoleonic, a composition expressing to the life the mad spirit of Irish jauntiness a troop of dancers, was sung one evening with great effect, by Allegrini, but, though active of Jenny Lind Concerts, have been the finest, by a great degree, of any we ever attended.

Fanny Meissner Cunningham or not Cunningham—A sale of useful and fancy articles, intended to aid the completion of this church edifice, will commence in the Upper Saloon of the Chinese Museum, on Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, at 3, P. M., and will continue at 10, A. M., on the three succeeding days.

PROPOSED REVOLUTION.

It becomes every man—more especially an editor—to be cautious in committing himself to principles and measures calculated to subvert the existing order of things. If it be true that "revolutions never go backward" (a proverb which has been sadly shaken by recent occurrences in Europe,) it becomes all wise men to be extremely cautious how they set those balls of change in motion. It is, therefore, with sentiments as yet of perfect neutrality, that we publish the following article, proposing a radical revolution in one of the highest interests of mankind. Oakford, Genin, and others of their class, must understand that we are not yet uncommitted upon this overshadowing subject. The article immediately before us, is from the Buffalo Courier—but we have noticed several others equally radical. We believe the grand source of the attempted revolutions, is an English journal of talent and character. This, we think, should be a reason for scanning closely every feature of the proposed change ere adopting it. Who knows but that it may conceal some insidious attack upon our glorious institutions? But to the article in question:

HATS.

There has lately been inserted, a new spoke, in the wheel of progress, which seems likely to become a permanency. The French, who are answerable for the unornamental, and still less useful contrivance which we wear upon our heads, repenting of the sin, or, perhaps, not to be outdone without revolutionizing something or somebody, are determined to introduce, at the Exhibition of all Nations, to be held in London, next year, a new style of head gear, or at least to do away with the old one. The English, fellow to that delicacy in the same cause, hail the expected change with delight, and Americans, who are, after all, the greatest slaves of the hat, must equally welcome the expected escape from a thraldom, as ridiculous as it is galling. For our part, we are ready, at any moment, to change our "tile" for any more appropriate and comfortable thing which may be introduced.

The present hat is as useless a contrivance as fashion ever imposed upon suffering humanity. It neither keeps off the rain nor the sun; is no protection against a fall, but, on the contrary, readily dissolves its allegiance with the head and becomes the "plaything of the casual wind." Americans convert it into an office, a place for papers, a portable resource in fine weather, and a distribution office, in breezy times, but this is a forced construction, never intended by the guilty inventor. A section of stove pipe would be quite as graceful, or a camp kettle without the handle; and more time is taken up in keeping the gloss perfect than ought to be expended upon a man's entire outer beautification. Let the nap once get rumpled, and forthwith the owner of the article is looked upon suspiciously, his paper is doubted on change, his word is not in business matters relied on, and, after a few days of unbrushedness, the rumor obtains that he drinks. Then let him sustain a contusion on one side of the thing, and his character is gone forever. Perhaps, all this time, the unfortunate man is the best of husbands and most affectionate of fathers, but, being obliged to hide even the babies, to go to market, make a fire in the grate, and brush his boots before he can get to his business, he finds himself bedevilled, and has from a respectable family man to a suspicious character, from a householder to a lodger and from being worthy much to be worthless, if not worse.

Shall we be asked what we would substitute for the present abomination? our reply is, that though we get nothing better, we cannot possibly get anything worse, and are for any change in favor of improvement. The best thing that we know of, now, is the limber felt, brought in to use by the exigencies of the Mexican campaign, the flexible, sun-shedding, lace-protecting somebrero, which, equally at home by night or night protection, and capable of being worn in its unsophisticated simplicity, or with the highest degree of ornamentation. Trim it with down about the edges of the brim, loop up one side thereof with a handsome clasp, and we have the elegant hat of the cavaliers, with a slight difference. Insert an ostrich plume in the band, and reminiscences of Henry the Eighth and Anne Boleyn are brought to mind, directly. Loop it up about three times, and we have the "cocked hat" of '76, reminiscent, by its numerous slant cluster about it. Or, if it be objected that plumes and down are not exactly the costume for venders of cooking stoves and raw hides, or for editors or carpenters, why then omit these superfluities and give us the hat with a broad, black buckle, if you like it. Such a head covering would be at once graceful and useful—would do away with the constant necessity of an umbrella to protect, not the person, but the hat, would be warm enough and cool enough, would, in fact, be fashion, which need not require constant care (or fear of being unpresentable, and could be used at all times and in all places. Success to the new revolution, say we, so it do not bring in a tunnel cage.

ENGLISH AND SCOTCH.

We had formed the opinion that the people of Scotland would compare very favorably with those of England, as respects the cleanliness and order of their housekeeping. The following extract from "Lang's Second State of Europe," however, conveys a different impression. Its statements are rendered more imposing, by their being copied without comment in "Chambers's Edinburgh Magazine." Mr. Lang says:

"Unless whiskey-drinking be a virtue not't of the land where, it is claimed, it was the invention of superior morality for the people of Scotland. If the traveller compare the indications of civilization in the middle and lower classes of the English and Scotch, he will find himself astonished to find that the latter are in a condition of the lowest, as compared with the former, especially among the female half of the community, on whom civilization mainly depends, in those smaller usages, habits, and ways of living, which add to the comfort and happiness of domestic and familiar life. There is a slattishness about the womankind and all the women's work in a Scotch dwelling of the lower or even of the middle-class family—a dirty contentedness of husband and wife with any discomfort or nuisance of one and another, which, in the English, is unknown. Even in Edinburgh, with its comparatively cleanly appearance, and after a few days of unbrushedness, the rumor obtains that he drinks. Then let him sustain a contusion on one side of the thing, and his character is gone forever. Perhaps, all this time, the unfortunate man is the best of husbands and most affectionate of fathers, but, being obliged to help dress the babies, to go to market, make a fire in the grate, and brush his boots before he can get to his business, he finds himself bedevilled, and has from a respectable family man to a suspicious character, from a householder to a lodger and from being worthy much to be worthless, if not worse.

Shall we be asked what we would substitute for the present abomination? our reply is, that though we get nothing better, we cannot possibly get anything worse, and are for any change in favor of improvement. The best thing that we know of, now, is the limber felt, brought into use by the exigencies of the Mexican campaign, the flexible, sun-shedding, lace-protecting somebrero, which, equally at home by night or night protection, and capable of being worn in its unsophisticated simplicity, or with the highest degree of ornamentation. Trim it with down about the edges of the brim, loop up one side thereof with a handsome clasp, and we have the elegant hat of the cavaliers, with a slight difference. Insert an ostrich plume in the band, and reminiscences of Henry the Eighth and Anne Boleyn are brought to mind, directly. Loop it up about three times, and we have the "cocked hat" of '76, reminiscent, by its numerous slant cluster about it. Or, if it be objected that plumes and down are not exactly the costume for venders of cooking stoves and raw hides, or for editors or carpenters, why then omit these superfluities and give us the hat with a broad, black buckle, if you like it. Such a head covering would be at once graceful and useful—would do away with the constant necessity of an umbrella to protect, not the person, but the hat, would be warm enough and cool enough, would, in fact, be fashion, which need not require constant care (or fear of being unpresentable, and could be used at all times and in all places. Success to the new revolution, say we, so it do not bring in a tunnel cage.

ENGLISH AND SCOTCH.

We had formed the opinion that the people of Scotland would compare very favorably with those of England, as respects the cleanliness and order of their housekeeping. The following extract from "Lang's Second State of Europe," however, conveys a different impression. Its statements are rendered more imposing, by their being copied without comment in "Chambers's Edinburgh Magazine." Mr. Lang says:

"Unless whiskey-drinking be a virtue not't of the land where, it is claimed, it was the invention of superior morality for the people of Scotland. If the traveller compare the indications of civilization in the middle and lower classes of the English and Scotch, he will find himself astonished to find that the latter are in a condition of the lowest, as compared with the former, especially among the female half of the community, on whom civilization mainly depends, in those smaller usages, habits, and ways of living, which add to the comfort and happiness of domestic and familiar life. There is a slattishness about the womankind and all the women's work in a Scotch dwelling of the lower or even of the middle-class family—a dirty contentedness of husband and wife with any discomfort or nuisance of one and another, which, in the English, is unknown. Even in Edinburgh, with its comparatively cleanly appearance, and after a few days of unbrushedness, the rumor obtains that he drinks. Then let him sustain a contusion on one side of the thing, and his character is gone forever. Perhaps, all this time, the unfortunate man is the best of husbands and most affectionate of fathers, but, being obliged to help dress the babies, to go to market, make a fire in the grate, and brush his boots before he can get to his business, he finds himself bedevilled, and has from a respectable family man to a suspicious character, from a householder to a lodger and from being worthy much to be worthless, if not worse.

Shall we be asked what we would substitute for the present abomination? our reply is, that though we get nothing better, we cannot possibly get anything worse, and are for any change in favor of improvement. The best thing that we know of, now, is the limber felt, brought into use by the exigencies of the Mexican campaign, the flexible, sun-shedding, lace-protecting somebrero, which, equally at home by night or night protection, and capable of being worn in its unsophisticated simplicity, or with the highest degree of ornamentation. Trim it with down about the edges of the brim, loop up one side thereof with a handsome clasp, and we have the elegant hat of the cavaliers, with a slight difference. Insert an ostrich plume in the band, and reminiscences of Henry the Eighth and Anne Boleyn are brought to mind, directly. Loop it up about three times, and we have the "cocked hat" of '76, reminiscent, by its numerous slant cluster about it. Or, if it be objected that plumes and down are not exactly the costume for venders of cooking stoves and raw hides, or for editors or carpenters, why then omit these superfluities and give us the hat with a broad, black buckle, if you like it. Such a head covering would be at once graceful and useful—would do away with the constant necessity of an umbrella to protect, not the person, but the hat, would be warm enough and cool enough, would, in fact, be fashion, which need not require constant care (or fear of being unpresentable, and could be used at all times and in all places. Success to the new revolution, say we, so it do not bring in a tunnel cage.

New Publications.

POEMS OF GRACE GREENWOOD. Boston: Tickner, Reed & Fields.

If there be any to whom these poems are new, we half envy them the startled delight with which they find in turning over the simple leaves, that they have unwittingly opened a casket of jewels—sparkling diamonds, burning, blood-red rubies, sapphires of heaven's own blue; pearls, pure apart, we consider this little book a rich gift to the public, and a fresh cause of rejoicing that genius cannot keep its beautiful visions and glorious thoughts close locked in its own heart—cannot carry its treasure through life and back to heaven unshared; but, by a God-ordained necessity of its nature, not to be evaded—a craving for sympathy not to be stifled, must scatter it forth, skowering blessings upon the thirsty earth, that gives back gladly in return the sweet breath of love and praise.

The already brilliant reputation of Grace Greenwood, chiefly won by prose writings of a high order, cannot fail to be much enhanced by the publication of this volume. There is always in her best efforts an eloquent enthusiasm that warms her subject into breathing life, and gives to passages of her prose the splendor and the charm of poetry; but the power and glowing beauty of her finest poems place her still higher in the ranks of genius. "Ariadne" would of itself, make the fame of its author. "The Horseback Ride" introduces the rider in the most spirited and captivating light. "Nina to Her-very" is mournfully sweet—we can see and feel her woman's heart throbbing wildly through the starry veil of richest poetry. "Birt, the Swimmer," is almost as exhilirating as a real plunge into the cool water on a summer day—such a spirit of keen enjoyment runs revelling, rioting through the lines. We can fancy the face of Birt, the wild-eyed sprite, glimpsing among the waves, as she gives herself with the maddest abandon to the spirit of that delicious sport. "The First Doubt" is one of the most perfect pieces in the book. Take these verses for instance, so sweetly tender, yet heavy with heart-breaking pathos:

We drink no more at hope's clear springs
But bitter draughts of vain regret—
Young Love who led us forth to life,
Rose-crowned and joyous, leads us yet;
But tearful now are his sunny eyes,
Faint smiles around his sweet lips play,
And red drops falling from his wounds
Stain all the flowers along his way.

Beware, oh dearest, lest some shaft
May pierce his gentle heart at last,
And the dim light of his soft smile
No longer on our path be cast!
Lest parting at his early grave,
We lift summer's purpled bloom to weep,
We go forth through the world's wild waste,
And tread its weary ways alone!

"A Fragment" is truly a splendid fragment—a burning flood of passionate poetry poured out at a white heat, and miraculously kept in fusion. "To ——, in Absence," finely expresses the exulting bliss of mutual love welling up triumphantly from the heart. "Constance" is one of our favorites; it is an exquisitely tender yet rapturous love song—the impassioned fervor of first affection sublimed and softened by absence. "To One Afar" is a stately and reverential tribute, couched in words of such majestic flow, that we involuntarily recal the invitation extended to modest worth, "Friend, go up higher!"

We have but glanced at the riches of this volume, just enough to give our poetry-loving readers a taste of the last sparkling draught from Helicon.

DR. HERE'S ANSWER TO THE LECTURE OF ARCHBISHOP HUGHES, ON THE DECEIT OF PROTESTANT AND Philadelphia. T. B Peterson, No. 98 Chestnut Street.

Archbishop Hughes, of New York, recently took occasion to deliver a lecture in New York, on the Decline of Protestantism. Now, whether Protestantism be right or wrong is a matter of faith and belief and argument; but, whether it is "declining," is a matter of fact. We must confess that the picture we see, as we look around the world, of the two sturdiest and wisest nations of the earth, England and America—both strongly Protestant—both increasing greatly in population and wealth with every year, does not look much like the decline of Protestantism.

Still, Archbishop Hughes thinks that it is declining, and, as we said, has attempted to prove it. Whereupon up starts sturdy Protestantism, in the shape of the Rev. Dr. Berg, of this city, and demonstrates to the satisfaction of a numerous audience, that Protestantism, so far from being in a decline, is not only still alive, but kicking.

All those Protestants who wish to be re-assured that their beloved faith was never more full of warm, healthy, vigorous life-blood than in this very year of our Lord, 1850, would do well to purchase and read Dr. Berg's address. Price 12½ cents.

THE PATHWAY AND ARCHWAY OF THE LORD: Illustrated in the Journal of Bishop Hall's Travels in the Land of Promise. By J. H. WAGGONER, D. D. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Philadelphia: G. S. Appleton.

A truly handsome volume, and a most appropriate present for the happy Christmas season, consecrated by memories of our blessed Lord.

It is the record of a tour in the Holy Land, published in most beautiful style, and illustrated with eighteen fine engravings. Among these latter are "The Mount of Olives, and Jerusalem from the North-East," "The Garden of Gethsemane," "Church of the Holy Sepulchre," "Fields of Bethany," "The Jordan," "Bethlehem," "Pool of Hezekiah," "Jacob's Well," "Nazareth," "Hill of Samaria," "Mount Tabor," "The Lake of Tiberias," &c., &c. These engravings are truly beautiful—in fact, the whole appears to have been spared in getting up the volume.

The reading matter is very interesting—both from the subject, and the style in which it is treated. We cannot doubt that the enterprise of the publishers in getting out this volume will be duly appreciated by the public.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ROBERT BURNS. Containing his Poems, Songs and Correspondence. With a new Life of the Poet, and copious critical and biographical Notes. By ALEXANDER SMITH. Philadelphia: T. B. Peterson & Brothers, No. 98 Chestnut Street. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 200 Broadway.

Robert Burns is one of those poets, whose best writings are not to be found in any collection, amid frost and pettiness, and simple humor, become the jest of men. His "Highland Mary," "Tam O'Shanter," "To Mary in Heaven," "Auld Lang Syne," and many others of his songs and poems, are household words, and universal honor and heart which will respond in unison to all he truth and nature endure. A pity it is, that so much native refinement should be found associated always allayed in his poetry with grossness and sensuality.

The present edition is an excellent one, and does honor to the enterprise of the publishers. We are sorry, however, that they have omitted a portrait of the poet, and hope they will supply it in the next edition. With that, the volume would be complete.

EVENINGS AT INNISMORE MANOR, OR, THE CHARM AND ITS POWER. By Mrs. J. M. Stoney, author of "Woman's Sacrifice," "Thorns and Coronet," "Secret Foes," &c. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Philadelphia: G. S. Appleton.

A beautiful volume—bound in red morocco, gilt. We should call it a kind of Annual Novel. It has the fine steel engravings, which appear to illustrate the story of "Donaldson Manor." The picture of the Manor itself, quite pale and in the notion of a country life—it is a beautiful grange-like home, overgrown with vines. The other engravings are entitled "The Mother's Ill Weather," "Take by Surprise," "The Flower Bird," "The Heir of the Manor," &c. Of the story part of the book, we are as yet unable to speak, but from what we know of Miss Meta-lane, we are inclined to think favorably of it.

THE INDEX. Jan. 1851. Philadelphia: A. Hart, late Carey & Hart.

An annual containing eight choice embellishments, viz.: "The Cossack," "The Cossack in the Tower," "The Three Fortunes," "The Diamond," "A Northern Legend," "William Tell," &c., &c. The literary matter is by Charles Howard, Charles Swain, Elizur Cooke, John Clarke, W. C. Bryant, &c. Altogether, a pretty gift book, in some gay mind of "sweet sixteen."

THE PATHWAY AND ARCHWAY OF THE LORD: Illustrated in the Journal of Bishop Hall's Travels in the Land of Promise. By J. H. WAGGONER, D. D. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Philadelphia: G. S. Appleton.

A truly handsome volume, and a most appropriate present for the happy Christmas season, consecrated by memories of our blessed Lord.

It is the record of a tour in the Holy Land, published in most beautiful style, and illustrated with eighteen fine engravings. Among these latter are "The Mount of Olives, and Jerusalem from the North-East," "The Garden of Gethsemane," "Church of the Holy Sepulchre," "Fields of Bethany," "The Jordan," "Bethlehem," "Pool of Hezekiah," "Jacob's Well," "Nazareth," "Hill of Samaria," "Mount Tabor," "The Lake of Tiberias," &c., &c. These engravings are truly beautiful—in fact, the whole appears to have been spared in getting up the volume.

The reading matter is very interesting—both from the subject, and the style in which it is treated. We cannot doubt that the enterprise of the publishers in getting out this volume will be duly appreciated by the public.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ROBERT BURNS. Containing his Poems, Songs and Correspondence. With a new Life of the Poet, and copious

SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Philadelphia:

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1850.

SATURDAY EVENING POST

STEAM-POWER BOOK AND JOB PRINTING OFFICE,

No. 66 South Third Street, Phila.,

Where Books, Pamphlets, Hand Bills, Way Bills, Circulars, Bill Heads, Cards, Labels, &c., &c., are printed with dispatch, in the neatest manner, and on the most reasonable terms.

DEACON & PETERSON, Proprietors.

From Washington.

THIRTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

OPENING OF THE SESSION.

SENATE.

At twelve o'clock, on the 2nd inst., the Senate met, forty-two members being present, and a large attendance in the galleries.

After the calling of the roll, and some other preliminary business, a message was received from the House of Representatives, informing the Senate that they had organized, and were ready to proceed to business.

A joint Committee from both Houses was then appointed to wait upon President Fillmore, and inform him of their organization.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House met at twelve o'clock, Mr. Speaker Cobb on the Chair. The roll was then called by the Clerk, and a large number of members answered to their names.

A Committee was appointed to wait on the President, in conjunction with a similar Committee from the Senate, to inform him of their organization.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate,

and of the House of Representatives:

Being suddenly called, in the midst of the last session of Congress, by a painful dispensation of Divine Providence, to this responsible station, which I now hold, I contented myself with such communications to the Legislature as the exigency of the moment seemed to require. The country was shrouded in mourning for the loss of its venerated Chief Magistrate, and all hearts were penetrated with grief. Neither the time nor the occasion appeared to require or to justify, on my part, any general expression of political opinions, or of recommendment of the principles which would govern me in the discharge of the duties to the performance of which I had been so unexpectedly called. I trust, therefore, that it may not be deemed inappropriate, if I avail myself of this opportunity of the re-assembling of Congress to make known my sentiments, in a general manner, in regard to the policy which ought to be pursued by the Government, both in its intercourse with foreign nations, and in its management and administration of internal affairs.

Nations, like individuals in a state of nature, are equal and independent, possessing certain rights, and owing certain duties to each other, arising from their necessary and unavoidable relations, which rights and duties there is no common human authority to protect and enforce. But they have rights and duties binding in morals, in conscience, and in honor, which exist in vain for the weak when no injured party can appeal but the forum of reason and judgment of mankind, and ultimately the arbitrament of the sword.

Among the acknowledged rights of nations is that, which each possesses of establishing such form of government which it may deem most conducive to the happiness and prosperity of its own citizens, or changing that form, as circumstances may require; and of managing its internal affairs according to its own will, free from the control of other States. Cases claim the right for themselves, and will not allow others. Hence it has become an important duty not to interfere in the government or internal policy of other nations; and although we may sometimes think that the welfare or the oppressed, every where, is thus neglected, we have always found it best, upon the whole, not to depart in such instances from it. We have no wars to promote or to prevent succession to the throne, or the internal policy of other States. It is understood that a thorough survey of the course of the communications in all directions, and there is every reason to expect that it will be prosecuted with characteristic energy, especially when that Government shall have consented to such stipulations with the Government of the United States as may be necessary to impart a feeling of security to those who embark their property in the enterprise. Negotiations are pending for the accomplishment of that object, and I hope in confidence entertained, that when the Government of Mexico shall become duly sensible of the advantages which that country cannot fail to derive from the work, and learn that the Government of the United States detects that the right of sovereignty of Mexico in the route shall remain unimpaired, the stipulations referred to will be agreed to with alacrity.

By the last advices from Mexico it would appear, however, that that Government entertains strong objections to some of the stipulations which the parties contained in the project of the ratified treaty necessary for their protection and security. Further consideration, it is to be hoped, or some slight modification, may yet remove the only difficulty existing between the two Governments in this respect.

Fresh instructions have recently been given to the Minister of the United States in Mexico, who is proceeding the subject with promptitude and ability.

Although the negotiations with Portugal for the payment of claims of citizens of the United States against that Government, have not yet resulted in a formal treaty, yet a proposition has been by the Government of Portugal, for the final adjustment and payment of those claims has recently been accepted on the part of the United States. It gives the pleasure to say that Mr. Clay, to whom the negotiation on the part of the United States had been committed, discharged the duties of his appointment with ability and discretion, and my views of the true character of his conduct will be found in the correspondence of the minister.

Although the ratification of the convention will be immediately urged and for carrying the agreement between the two Governments into effect.

The commissioner appointed under the act of Congress for carrying into effect the convention with Brazil of the 27th of January, 1849, has entered upon the performance of the duties imposed upon him by that act. It is hoped that those duties may be completed within the time limited by its provisions. The documents, however, which the Imperial Government has to furnish to the board are of extensive, if possible to furnish to the Government of the United States, that it will be impossible for it to be done within the time limited for the correct disposition of the claims, it may become necessary for Congress to make provision for a limited for the duration of the commission. The business is pushed by the minister of the United States on the part of this Government has been received.

The collection in the ports of the United States of duties on goods arriving during the first half of the year 1850 has been unexpectedly large, and their receipts into them unexpended, pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress of the 28th of May, 1830. It is to be hoped that this measure will not impair a fresh impulse to the business of the country. The receipts of customs and of the sales of the public lands during the present fiscal year will probably exceed the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the expenditures will be proportionately less than the appropriations.

The papers accompanying the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the warrants issued upon the receipts, in variety and number, are great, as to justify the conclusion that it is an evil which requires the application of a remedy. The practice of drawing warrants in favor of the accounting officers of the Treasury, upon the mere estimates made by the chief of the bureaus, in anticipation of the action of Congress upon the appropriations asked for by the Secretary, should be discontinued. This recommendation is not intended to affect the claims of the parties to the receipt of moneys actually appropriated by law and due to them. The practice to which I refer has grown into such extensive proportions as to require the application of a remedy. The remedy is simple, and no change that the contemplated fabric can be prepared with it, and its use be made universal. Wood, for the timing of axles prepared by this process, possesses a perfect resistance to the fracture, however much it may be subjected to jarring and disturbance. Steel springs, tempered in this manner, are more elastic and durable. Cast iron, when submitted to the action of this agent, becomes more malleable and tenacious, and consequently stronger and more durable. Leather prepared by this process becomes soft, pliable, and very durable. Gun-barrels of wrought metal exclusively of "Important, if true."

Chinese Magyars.—Gutzlaff, the Chinese Missionary, says that he has discovered in an interior province of China, a tribe who speak exactly the same language as the Magyars of Hungary. This tribe is entirely ignorant of Christianity. Two Hungarian gentlemen, named Healy, are going out to China with the Missionary on his return, for the purpose of visiting these Chinese Magyars.

A Curious Witness a Bandit.—The Special Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which was held in New York last week, adjourned sine die, after a three days' session, in which it was found impossible to elect a provisional Bishop for the New York diocese. The diocese remains therefore without an acting Bishop for another year.

☞ We learn from the Boston Atlas, that a night or two ago, Mr. Paine gave an exhibition of his gas-light at Worcester, previous to sending an agent to London, to introduce the gas at the exhibition at the World's Fair. The party present pronounced the exhibition as astonishing, almost amazing.

Rules of Health.—The number of deaths during the last week in this city was 111—adults 53, and children 58.

It is somewhat out that each member should examine the merits of every claim on which he is compelled to vote, and it is unprofessional to refer a member to the vote of his colleague. If such a course were to prevail, it would frequently result, do injustice either to the constituent of the Government, and I perceive no better mode for this than the appointment of a committee of investigation, to whom all claims should be referred, and who should report, respectively, to recommend that provision be made for the payment of the amount found to be due, or that no provision be made. I submit the subject to the consideration of Congress, and, as an additional reason for the adoption of some such measure as that indicated, would add the consideration that such an appointment would relieve the Secretary of the Treasury from the responsibility of deciding upon the validity of claims, which, in many instances, is now imposed upon him by law.

The report of the Secretary of War presents a satisfactory account of the administration of the affairs of his department during the past year. The organization of the army remains unchanged, and the troops are in a state of high discipline and efficiency. The recruiting service has been successful in obtaining the requisite number of men to fill the ranks of the army. The act of Congress of the 9th of September last, increasing the pay of musicians and privates, has had a happy effect in promoting enlistments and reducing the number of desertions. The operations of the topographical bureau have been actively prosecuted during the year, and the reports of the officers employed in the various explorations and surveys ordered by the Department will be communicated to Congress as soon as they can be completed and received at the seat of Government. The duty of providing for the national defence by fortifications of our seaboard frontier has been prosecuted with vigor during the year, and the Board of Engineers and officers of the corps of Engineers have been constantly employed in the discharge of the duties assigned to them. The Secretary of War has directed examinations and surveys to be made of the most important harbors, and has submitted plans and estimates for the construction of fortifications necessary for the defence of the coast. The sum of $1,000,000 appropriated at the last session of Congress for the defence of the northern and northwestern frontiers, has been applied to the completion of fortifications at Rouse's Point, Plattsburg, Sackett's Harbor, and Oswego, and to the commencement of new works at Buffalo and Detroit. The Secretary of War has also directed examinations and surveys to be made of the most important points on the northern and northwestern frontiers, with a view to the selection of sites for fortifications, and has submitted plans and estimates for the construction of fortifications at Rouse's Point, Plattsburg, Sackett's Harbor, Oswego, Buffalo, and Detroit. The Secretary of War has also directed examinations and surveys to be made of the most important points on the northern and northwestern frontiers, with a view to the selection of sites for fortifications, and has submitted plans and estimates for the construction of fortifications at Rouse's Point, Plattsburg, Sackett's Harbor, Oswego, Buffalo, and Detroit.

The Secretary of the Navy has also directed examinations and surveys to be made of the most important harbors, and has submitted plans and estimates for the construction of fortifications necessary for the defence of the coast. The sum of $1,000,000 appropriated at the last session of Congress for the defence of the northern and northwestern frontiers, has been applied to the completion of fortifications at Rouse's Point, Plattsburg, Sackett's Harbor, Oswego, Buffalo, and Detroit. The Secretary of War has also directed examinations and surveys to be made of the most important points on the northern and northwestern frontiers, with a view to the selection of sites for fortifications, and has submitted plans and estimates for the construction of fortifications at Rouse's Point, Plattsburg, Sackett's Harbor, Oswego, Buffalo, and Detroit.

MILLARD FILLMORE.

WASHINGTON, December 2d, 1850.

General News.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Georgia.—The election on Monday week, in Georgia, for members to the State Convention, resulted in the election of 148 Union men, and 90 Secessionists.

Massachusetts.—The elections held to fill vacancies in the Legislature, have resulted in the election of the Democratic candidates, free Soilionists, who have this far carried 24 members, and the Whigs 3. The Traveller says this makes the result, so far, giving a number of disputed members to the Whigs, 310 Coalitionists and 178 Whigs, or 18 Coalition majority.

Maryland.—The warrant for the arrest of Gov. Quitman, for being implicated in the Cuban invasion, had been received at Jackson, Miss., from New Orleans. It is said that the object of the Governor's calling an extra session of the Legislature, was to prevent him from being arrested.

Gen. Cass.—The Rockville (Md.) Journal, says, that Gen. Chaplin is still in jail at that place, the nineteen thousand dollars bail not having yet been entered into.

Texas.—Late advices from Texas says:—The vote on the Pearce Bill is in favor of its acceptance by at least two or three to one throughout the State, but not by so large a majority as we supposed.

California.—James M. Crane, Esq., senior editor of the California Courier, is spoken of as United States Senator, in place of Col. Fremont. Mr. Crane is a Whig. It is conceded now that the Legislature lately chosen is Whig in both branches.

The President of Mexico.—By advices received at New Orleans, it is ascertained that Gen. Arista has been elected President of that Republic by a large majority.

TERRIFIC TORNADO.

A telegraphic despatch dated Louisville, Nov. 30, says:

One of the most appalling and destructive tornadoes which has been experienced in the Mississippi Valley for several years, occurred about two o'clock in the afternoon.

It swept over the town of Cane Grandeau, Mo., situated on the Mississippi River, just below St. Louis, and in a few minutes scattered destruction and ruin in its path, in which the dwellings, stores, churches, and other public buildings, and principal business houses in the place.

The Catholic Church was destroyed, and the Catholic convent were destroyed.

Two of the large and splendid telegraph masts belonging to the Lightning Line of Orleans Telegraph Company were crushed, shivered, and brought to the ground with as much ease as though they had been the frail stems of the Canada thistle.

In order that you may judge of the tremendous violence of the storm, I will state that the Mississippi River, which is now very low, was lashed into foam, and deposited in the top of a tree, sixty feet from the ground.

I do not think that the devastation cannot as yet be ascertained, but it is certainly very great, as numbers are doubtless lying beneath the ruins of their houses. Those who escaped with their lives say that the gallant little Palmetto State is assuming a highly warlike attitude.

Governor Seabrook recommends the reduction of the present rate of interest, and the removal from the State of every free colored person not possessed of real or slave property. On this head he says:

It is my deliberate opinion that the period has arrived for the removal from the State of every free colored person who is not the owner of real estate or slave property. This population is not only a non-productive class, but it is, and always has been, specially inimical to the well being. Their longer residence among us, if the warfare between the North and South is to continue, will eventually generate evils very difficult of eradication. Possessing, in an unlimited degree, the right of locomotion, they can, in person, have no interest in any departure on the part of the State to another, or, through the Post-Office, mature their plans of villany, as they have been known to do, for domestic slaves, and in other modes, with impunity. It should also be retained to examine and report upon the questions of discreet such, and the measures best calculated to improve their productiveness. By publishing the results of such experiments, with scientific explanations, and by the collection and distribution of rare seeds and plants, with instructions as to the best system of cultivation, much may be done to promote this great national interest.

In compliance with the act of Congress, passed on the 9th of May, 1850, providing, among other things, for taking the seventh census, a supplemental was appointed, and all other measures adopted which were deemed necessary to ensure the prompt and faithful performance of that duty. The appropriation already made will, it is believed, be sufficient to defray the whole expense of the work. No further legislation may be necessary in regard to the compensation of some of the marshals of the Territories. It will also be proper to make provision by law, at an early day, for the publication of such sheets of the returns of the census as may require.

The whole number of persons entitled to vote, under the apportionment based upon the census of 1840, was 2,908,000. The number of votes actually polled and counted was 2,700,000, leaving upwards of 200,000 persons who were entitled to vote, but who did not exercise the right. The number of votes polled in the Union at the Presidential election in 1844 was 2,700,000, and in 1848 2,900,000. The number of votes polled in the Union at the Presidential election in 1844 was 2,700,000, and in 1848 2,900,000.

Fine-Proof Roses.—Prof. Johnson of St. Louis, has discovered a method, it is said, by which roses can be rendered entirely indestructible by fire. The process is stated to be very simple, and so cheap that the commonest labor can be prepared with it, and its use be made universal. Wood, for the timing of axles prepared by this process, possesses a perfect resistance to the fracture, however much it may be subjected to jarring and disturbance. Steel springs, tempered in this manner, are more elastic and durable. Cast iron, when submitted to the action of this agent, becomes more malleable and tenacious, and consequently stronger and more durable. Leather prepared by this process becomes soft, pliable, and very durable. Gun-barrels of wrought metal exclusively of "Important, if true."

Chinese Magyars.—Gutzlaff, the Chinese Missionary, says that he has discovered in an interior province of China, a tribe who speak exactly the same language as the Magyars of Hungary. This tribe is entirely ignorant of Christianity. Two Hungarian gentlemen, named Healy, are going out to China with the Missionary on his return, for the purpose of visiting these Chinese Magyars.

A Curious Witness a Bandit.—The Special Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which was held in New York last week, adjourned sine die, after a three days' session, in which it was found impossible to elect a provisional Bishop for the New York diocese. The diocese remains therefore without an acting Bishop for another year.

☞ We learn from the Boston Atlas, that a night or two ago, Mr. Paine gave an exhibition of his gas-light at Worcester, previous to sending an agent to London, to introduce the gas at the exhibition at the World's Fair. The party present pronounced the exhibition as astonishing, almost amazing.

Rules of Health.—The number of deaths during the last week in this city was 111—adults 53, and children 58.

TRAVELLING AGENTS.

Mr. ISRAEL K. JAMES, No. 120 South Tenth Street, Philadelphia, a city general Travelling Agent, assisted by James K. Wiggin, William H. Wood, John Crabine, James Darring, A. Kirk Wallington, Chas. B. Hall, R. S. Boone, Jas. Clark, John W Allen, and P. Leake.

Also, CHAS. S. HALL, for and in Arkansas.

Mr. C. W. JAMES, No. 1 Harrison Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, is our general travelling agent for the Western States; assisted by J. R. Smith, J. T. Dana, Jason Taylor, J. W. Armstrong, Perrin Leake, W. Kearney, and G. Blakeman.

Mr. HENRY M. LEWIS, of Montgomery, Alabama, is our general travelling agent for Alabama, and Tennessee, assisted by Joseph B. Stewart.

WILLIAM A. FIERCE is our only Collector of Bills in Pennsylvania.

MORTIMER T. WEBB, do do for New York State.

JUSTUS WHITE, do do and collects for us in New York and the Canadas.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

MAY be obtained weekly at the Periodical Depots at HOTCHKISS & Co., Mobile, Alabama.

Mr. BUSTION BOULEMET, Mobile, Alabama.

Of J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans, La.

Of J. GUSH & BROTHER, Lancaster, Pa.

Of W. TAYLOR & Co., Baltimore, Md.

Of SAFFORD & PARR, Norwich, Connecticut.

Of P. HAGAN & Co., Nashville, Tenn.

Of S. W. PEASE & Co., No. 94 Bank Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Of WELD & Co., New Orleans, La.

Of J. W. RANDOLPH & Co., Richmond, Va.

Of W. ADAM, Washington, D. C.

Robert Shannon & Co. are supplied either of the above mentioned Depots. But the proprietors of the Post hold themselves responsible only for money received direct by themselves, or through their authorized travelling agents.

South Carolina.—Governor Seabrook, in his recent Message to the Legislature, goes "the entire swine" for secession. He assumes the right of secession as unquestionable. He says:

The time, then, has arrived to resume the exercise of this right of self-protection, which, in the hour of unsuspecting confidence, we surrendered to foreign hands. We must re-organize our political system on some surer and safer basis. The event is indissolubly linked with its cause, and fixed as destiny.

The Governor also says that he has purchased a large number of muskets and rifles, and caused several thousand pounds of cannon-powder to be manufactured at Columbia, and the State being much in need of field-pieces, he recommends the purchase of six brass twelve-pounders, six six-pounders, and six four-pounders—recommends the establishment of depots for military stores and implements of war at Anderson, Spartanburg and Marion, and that the depots be placed under the command of graduates of the Citadel Academy, with a limited number of young men—thinks sufficient attention has not been paid to instructing the militia as to the practical operations in the art of war. The want of proper pyrotechnic laboratory, and engineering instruments and battery of artillery is keenly felt, and he recommends their purchase by the State. It will thus be seen that the gallant little Palmetto State is assuming a highly warlike attitude.

Governor Seabrook recommends the reduction of the present rate of interest, and the removal from the State of every free colored person not possessed of real or slave property. On this head he says:

It is my deliberate opinion that the period has arrived for the removal from the State of every free colored person who is not the owner of real estate or slave property. This population is not only a non-productive class, but it is, and always has been, specially inimical to the well being. Their longer residence among us, if the warfare between the North and South is to continue, will eventually generate evils very difficult of eradication. Possessing, in an unlimited degree, the right of locomotion, they can, in person, have no interest in any departure on the part of the State to another, or, through the Post-Office, mature their plans of villany, as they have been known to do, for domestic slaves, and in other modes, with impunity. It should also be retained to examine and report upon the questions of discreet such, and the measures best calculated to improve their productiveness. By publishing the results of such experiments, with scientific explanations, and by the collection and distribution of rare seeds and plants, with instructions as to the best system of cultivation, much may be done to promote this great national interest.

In compliance with the act of Congress, passed on the 9th of May, 1850, providing, among other things, for taking the seventh census, a supplemental was appointed, and all other measures adopted which were deemed necessary to ensure the prompt and faithful performance of that duty. The appropriation already made will, it is believed, be sufficient to defray the whole expense of the work. No further legislation may be necessary in regard to the compensation of some of the marshals of the Territories. It will also be proper to make provision by law, at an early day, for the publication of such sheets of the returns of the census as may require.

The whole number of persons entitled to vote, under the apportionment based upon the census of 1840, was 2,908,000. The number of votes actually polled and counted was 2,700,000, leaving upwards of 200,000 persons who were entitled to vote, but who did not exercise the right. The number of votes polled in the Union at the Presidential election in 1844 was 2,700,000, and in 1848 2,900,000. The number of votes polled in the Union at the Presidential election in 1844 was 2,700,000, and in 1848 2,900,000.

Marriages.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 28th, by the Rev. Mr. Bachelor, Mr. Edward Bowers, to Miss Ann Thompson, both of this city.

On the 28th ult. by the Rev. Thos. G. Allen, Mr. Jesse W. Preston, of Philadelphia, to Miss Ellen Vansaunt, of Bethlehem, Pa.

On the 27th ult. by John C. Wilson, V. D. M., Mr. Charles G. Pierce, to Miss Amanda Clinton, all of Kensington.

On the 27th ult. by the Rev. Thos. G. Allen, Mr. William H. Fry, to Miss Mary Hendrick.

On the 28th ult. in St Philip's Church, by the Rev. Charles D. Cooper, Philip Hayes, Esq. of Pottsville, Pa., to Sarah, daughter of the late Rev. Alexander Boyd, Rowland, of Cheltenham, Montgomery county.

On the 28th ult. by the Rev. Mr. Bachelor, Mr. Jeremiah Foss, to Miss Sarah M. Bacon, both of this city.

On the 28th ult. by the Rev. Thos. G. Allen, Mr. Joseph Hall, to Miss Mary Ann Hall, both of Kensington.

On the 28th ult. by the Rev. Thos. G. Allen, Mr. Jesse W. Preston, of Philadelphia, to Miss Ellen Vansaunt, of Bethlehem, Pa.

On the 27th ult. by John C. Wilson, V. D. M., Mr. Charles G. Pierce, to Miss Amanda Clinton, all of Kensington.

On the 27th ult. by the Rev. Thos. G. Allen, Mr. William H. Fry, to Miss Mary Hendrick.

On the 28th ult. in St Philip's Church, by the Rev. Charles D. Cooper, Philip Hayes, Esq. of Pottsville, Pa., to Sarah, daughter of the late Rev. Alexander Boyd, Rowland, of Cheltenham, Montgomery county.

On the 28th ult. by the Rev. Mr. Bachelor, Mr. Jeremiah Foss, to Miss Sarah M. Bacon, both of this city.

On the 28th ult. by the Rev. S. B. Wylie, D. D., William K. Hemmell, to Sarah Ann, daughter of Chesnut McCune, Esq.

On the 14th ult. by Friends' Ceremony, Jesaiah W. Woodward, to Lizzie W. daughter of the late Dr. Edward P. Allen, all of this city.

On the 5th ult. by the Rev. Benj. F. Tompkins, Mr. John B. Tilton, to Miss Sarah M. Black, all of this city, and has emigrated to the West.

On the 6th of August, by the Rev. John Chambers, Mr. A. McGeehan, to Miss S. Goulter, both of this city.

On the 31st ultimo, by the Rev. N. Cantwell, Mr. Andrew D. Gillespie, of Swanson Beach, Del. to Miss Hannah Anderson, daughter of Wm. Wilson, of this city.

On the 19th of Sept. last by the Rev. Jas. Power, George L. Dougherty, Esq. to Miss Ellen O'Donnell, all of this city.

On the 24th of Sept. by the Rev. John Power, Mr. John Reilly, to Miss Sarah Ann Reilly, both of this city.

On the 17th of Oct. by the same, Mr. William C. Hone, to Miss Amanda Ashcraft, all of Philadelphia.

On the 17th ult. by the Rev. Thos. Murphy, Mr. Abel C. Stokes, to Matilda Slaughter, all of this city.

On the 26th ult. by Friends' Ceremony, in the presence of Charles Evans, Mayor of the city of Philadelphia, Samuel E. Ashbridge to Mary A. Hoge, both of West Marlborough Township, Chester county, Pa.

Deaths.

On the 28th ult. Elizabeth, wife of Mr. George Nice, aged 41 years.

On the 29th ult. Miss Elsie S. Fellowes, aged 26.

On the 16th ult. Benton Conton, aged 34 years.

On the 17th ult. Mrs. Catharine Conton, aged 54.

On the 24th ult. George Thomas, aged 54 years.

On the 26th ult. Mrs. Jane Connelly, aged 45.

On the 27th ult. Lieut. John Hoover, aged 38.

On the 27th ult. Samuel Bean, aged 43 years.

On the 27th ult. Mrs. Mary A. Reynolds, aged 61.

On the 28th ult. Sarah A. Dixon, aged 5 years.

On the 28th ult. Mrs. Elizabeth Stratline, aged 85 years.

On the 28th ult. Mrs. Mary, wife of Thos. Seybert, aged 45 years.

On the 27th ult. Mary, relict of the late Jonathan Hoopes, aged 75 years.

On the 28th ult. Gunner Rose, aged 84 years.

On the 28th ult. Mr. Thomas Johnston, aged 51.

On the 27th ult. Miss Jane Murphy, aged 20.

On the 28th ult. Isabella Campbell, daughter of Wm. and Martha Gregory, aged 1 year 11 months.

On the 28th ult. Sarah B. wife of Isaac Wood.

On the 27th ult. Clara, daughter of Peter and Mary Cox, aged 4 years.

On the 27th ult. James Mullins, aged 81 years.

On the 29th ult. Mrs. Catharine Ingram, aged 75 years.

On the 29th ult. Albert Christie, son of Frank. in and Rebecca Read, aged 6 years.

On the 27th ult. Mrs. Hannah Sheridan, aged 65.

In New Orleans on the 19th ultimo, Mr. Francis Cornwell, formerly of Philadelphia, aged 49 years.

On the 27th ult. Charles, son of Chas. and Margaret Bishop, aged 2 years and 2 months.

On the 27th ult. Mary E. Hawley, aged 6 years and 10 months.

On the 27th ult. Elizabeth, daughter of Thos. and Amanda Byrnes, aged 16 months.

On the 27th ult. Mrs. Ann Francis, aged 61.

On the 27th ult. Mrs. Mary Mosher, aged 77.

On the 24th ult. Mrs. Mary T. Jackson, aged 58.

On the 27th ult. Mrs. Caroline Barnes, aged 68.

On the 27th ult. Mrs. Jane Wagner, aged 77.

On the 26th ult. Mr. John Lonns, aged 34 years.

On the 27th ultimo, Josephine L. Hartle, aged 3 years and 1 month.

On the 24th ult. John A. Altaker, aged 8 years.

On the 24th ult. Edward P. son of Geo. and Margaret Hoffman, aged 1 year.

On the 25th ult. Mary Morgan, aged 19 years.

Bank Note List.

CORRECTED FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST, BY E. JOHNSTON & Co., BROKERS, No. 10 South Third Street.

PHILADELPHIA.		December 6, 1850.
PENNSYLVANIA.		MASSACHUSETTS.
Philadelphia banks	par	All solvent banks	1 dis
U S bank notes	1 dis	Pawtucket bk	failed
Bank of Penn Twp	1 dis	Portsmouth and Middletown notes	no sale
York	1 dis	RHODE ISLAND.
Berks county	no sale	All solvent banks	1 dis
Gettysburg	1 dis	Eagle bk, Bristol	2 dis
Carlisle	1 dis	Mech and Man. Providence	failed
Lancaster	no sale	Phenix bk, Westerly
Brownsville	1 dis	union town	no sale
Pittsburg	1 dis	CANADA
Wyoming	1 dis	Montreal	4 dis
Washington	1 dis	VIRGINIA
Erie	1 dis	Bk of Va & branches	1 dis
Susquehanna co	failed	Far Bk & branches	1 dis
Honesdale	par	Exchange bk & branches	1 dis
Lehigh county	no sale	Ex Bk & branches	1 dis
Towanda	no sale	Wheeling	1 dis
Hounsdale	1 dis	SOUTH CAROLINA
Harrisburg	1 dis	Merchants' & Planters'
Wood Branch	par	Bk of S C	1 dis
Wyoming	par	All solvent banks	1 dis
Middletown	par	Solvent notes	1 dis
Northampton	no sale	SOUTH CAROLINA
Schuylkill Haven	par	Bk of Charleston	1 dis
Chambersb'g	par	Bk of Camden	1 dis
Danville	par	Small notes	1 dis
Bedford notes	1 to 1 dis	GEORGIA
NEW JERSEY.		Bk of St Mary's	1 dis
Trenton, M'f Bank		Commercial bk of Ga	1 dis
Bridgeton, Salem, Camden, Medford	par	Georgia R R Co	1 dis
Paterson	par	Roads over the bay	—
Belleville, Morristown, New Brunswick	par	All solvent banks	1 dis
Newark	par	Small notes	1 dis
Morris Canal & B Co	par	ALABAMA.
Commercial bk, Camden	failed	Bk of Mobile	4 dis
Manufacturers' bk	failed	Country banks	1 dis
Salem bk at Morris	failed	MISSISSIPPI.
Farmers' bk, Newton		All banks	no sale
Patterson, Morristown, New Hope	par	All solvent bks	1 dis
Belvidere, Hackettstown, Dover, Rahway	par	FLORIDA.
Farmers' bk, Amboy	4 dis	Bk Life & Trust Co	—
Farmers and Mech bk, N Hope	uncertain	OHIO.
Mechanics' bk, Bridgeton	par	Bk of Wooster	90 dis
Yard Del Bk at	10 dis	Bk Norwalk	75 dis
DELAWARE.		Com bk of Sdsky	75 dis
All solvent banks	par	All solvent bks	1 dis
City Bk under 5's	4 dis	Small notes	1 dis
Other notes	5 dis	KENTUCKY
MARYLAND		All solvent bks	1 dis
Baltimore banks	1 dis	Small notes	1 dis
Maryland bank	1 dis	INDIANA
Salisbury	uncertain	State bank	1 dis
Frederick	1 dis	Small notes	1 dis
Frederick county	1 dis	ILLINOIS
Hagerstown	1 dis	Bank at Shawneetown	90 dis
Washington county	1 dis	Bank at Alton	75 dis
Hagerstown	1 dis	Bank of Cairo	—
Hancock	1 dis	MISSOURI.
Hancock Branch	1 dis	All solvent banks	11 dis
Farm'rs Manu bk	no sale	TENNESSEE
DIST OF COLUMBIA		All solvent banks	11 dis
All solvent banks	1 dis	Bk East Tenn	10 dis
NEW YORK		MICHIGAN
City banks	par	Bk of St Clair	no sale
Bk Chemung	10 dis	Bank in Monroe	1 dis
Country banks	uncertain	Gov Stock bk	uncertain
MAINE.		ARKANSAS
All solvent banks	4 dis	All banks	no sale
NEW HAMPSHIRE		WISCONSIN
All solvent banks	1 dis	Miners' Fund	—
VERMONT		Bank of Mineral	—
Bank of St Albans	1 dis	Bank of Wisconsin	—
All solvent banks	1 dis	IOWA
CONNECTICUT		Miners' Bank	—
All solvent banks	1 dis

TO THE SICK AND AFFLICTED.

DR. SWAYNE'S

CELEBRATED FAMILY MEDICINES.

DR. SWAYNE'S

COMPOUND SYRUP OF WILD CHERRY

IS now, and has ever been, the most valuable preparation that has ever been offered to the public. The many cures this medicine is performing almost astonishes even the country itself throughout the whole extent. Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat of Blood, Weakness in the Breast or Side, Pain in the Side, Nervous Affections, Liver Complaint, Broken Constitution, Worms, &c., &c.

Remember—A preparation of Wild Cherry except Dr. Swayne's is worthless and counterfeit.

DYSPEPSIA OR WORMS.—DR. SWAYNE'S VERMIFUGE is certainly the most pleasant and effectual remedy for the destruction of worms, of the many that are now in general use. For proof of this, it has ever been offered to the public. None genuine, except that its signature bottles. With the portrait of Dr. Swayne, and his name blown in the glass.

DR. SWAYNE'S SYRIAN CHATEU-NARNA PILLS AND TONIC PILLS, a great purifier of the blood, a safe and effectual cure without mercury, and for consumptive accident to females are very valuable.

The above valuable medicines are prepared only by DR. SWAYNE, No. 8 North Fifth Street, Philadelphia, and for sale by druggists in Philadelphia generally.

ARCHER & WARNER,

MANUFACTURERS,

NO. 138 CHESNUT STREET,

Would call the attention of purchasers to their extensive and splendid assortment of

ELEGANT LAMPS,

CHANDELIERS, BRACKETS, PENDANTS,

And other articles of original and tasteful designs, and of the best workmanship and finish. The recent addition to the premises occupied by the Messrs. Archer has given great improvement established in their workmanship, and especially for the BEAUTY and GRACE of their

ORIGINAL PATTERNS,

as a guarantee of the purity of which the name of each individual will be introduced with an assurance that will be satisfactory to purchasers.

They also introduce that Paper one hundred in the best manner, and at the lowest rates, and attend to all kinds of Silvering and Repairing. All work done for the same.

WARRANTED SATISFACTORY.

The large assortment of improved establishment, and the distance of labor employed in their factory, enables them to offer for sale at the lowest prices.

ORIGINAL PATTERNS.

☞ The proprietor of this fancy establishment is the only one in regard to either workmanship or price.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

For a single square, first insertion,	$0.50
For each subsequent insertion,	$1.00
For one square 6 months,	$20.00
For one square, a year,	$40.00

☞ Payment is required in advance.

LADIES' NATIONAL MAGAZINE.

ONLY $1,25 TO CLUBS WHERE OTHERS ARE $2,00.

JUNCTARY NUMBER READY.

THE JANUARY NUMBER FOR 1851 IS now ready, with four magnificent steel plates and seventy-two pages of reading. While he other magazines have raised their prices in clubs, this is furnished at the old rates; so that this, postage and all, will not cost as much as the others without postage. For 1851, too, it will be far better than for 1850. Instead, however, of making van boasts, we quote what others say of us:

Unsurpassed by any in the literary world. The price $2 per annum, is an extraordinary and worth five times that amount.—Keystone, Pharmacist, Pa.

Not surpassed by any of the magazines of the day.—Fayette Freeman, Ind.

It is, in our opinion, the best and cheapest magazine of the day.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

One of the most interesting magazines now published.—Ohio Clipper.

Conducted with much ability, and holds its own with the more costly magazines.—Baltimore Reading Gazette.

Maintains its high position in the front rank of the magazines of the day.—Ohio Statesman, Columbus.

TERMS—CHEAPEST OF ALL.

One copy per annum $2 | Five copies per $7.50
Three copies do. $5 | Eight copies $10 | Sixteen copies do $20

FREE MUSIC FOR CLUBS.

For a club of three, five or eight we will send either of our premium plates, each being 24 inches by 18 in size, and for a club of sixteen we will send an extra copy of the magazine.

Address, post-paid, CHARLES J. PETERSON, dec 7-3t No. 98 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia.

THOMAS C. GARRETT & Co.,

No. 126 CHESNUT STREET, BELOW FOURTH,

HAVE received a great variety of goods suitable for HOLIDAY PRESENTS.

Their stock of Watches is large and among them may be found many that are very elegant and of superior quality.

JEWELRY.

Consisting of complete sets of entirely new style, Enamelled, Jewett and relics wrought Gold Ladies' Chatelaines or Short Chains, with Hooks, Pins, and Trinkets suited to them.

Gentlemen's Vest, Fob and Guard Chains and Seals. The most fashionable styles of Bracelets, Bracelets, Ear and Finger Rings, Cuff Pins, Arm bands, Medallions, Crosses, Pencils, Tooth Picks, Thimbles, Scissors, Silver Spectacles, Gold Pencils, and Card Cases and Children's Rattles.

PLATED WARE.

*Tea Sets, Cake Baskets, Castors, Card Receivers, Waiters, Salt Cellars, Fish and Dessert Knives, Soup Ladles, Sugar Shovels, Pie and Cake Knives, Pastry Forks, Butter Knives, Fruit Knives, Table Spoons, Dessert Spoons, Tea Spoons, Salt Cellars, Soup Ladles, Gravy Spoons, Fish Slices, Pie and Cake Knives, Pastry Forks, Butter Knives, Fruit Knives, Table Spoons, Dessert Spoons, Tea Spoons, Salt Cellars, Soup Ladles, Gravy Spoons, Fish Slices, Pie and Cake Knives, Pastry Forks, Butter Knives, Fruit Knives, Table Spoons, Dessert Spoons, Tea Spoons, Salt Cellars, Soup Ladles, Gravy Spoons, Fish Slices, Pie and Cake Knives, Pastry Forks, Butter

Selected Poetry.

LINES
ON THE DEATH OF REV. DR. JUDSON.

[One reading who are interested in Foreign Missions, will read with pleasure the following fine Requiem over her late husband.]

Was it on the sea wave's moan,
That dreary, startled tone,
That broke the silence lone, on Indian seas?
The swell returning on,
The Sussman homeward bore,
While swept that summer shore the evening breeze!

No! other sounds than these,
Time earth's low melodies,
Amid the tall palm trees, rose on the air
Where parted wave from wave,
To make an occanspace,
A lonely Christian gave a brother there!

Free from Life's heavy woes,
Wraps in Death's sweet repose,
Calmly the waters close above his form,
And when the prayer was said,
And when the tear was shed,
Mourned they his spirit fled from earthly storm?

How will the dark-browed race
Miss his familiar face!
Look at his vacant place, with saddened heart!
He, too, the wept, slept,
Where wanting sickness slept,
He o'er their dead hath wept—could he depart?

He taught them to forsake
Their idols—and to wake
From Error's sleep, and make his faith their own.
Answering their spirits' need,
Their Saviour's wounds to heed,
Thus was he a risky saved, and they alone!

The mortal mind must rest
Its mortal fetters bind,
And stay its burning thirst, at Wisdom's well,
Ere it can tell how blest
That spirit in its rest,
How glorious the guest, where angels dwell!

Go, child of sin, and learn
His inward love was stern,
But, oh! beyond Life's bourne—reward was given
For many souls he won
To God—his work is done,
And Christ, the incorruptible Seed, cleanse him at his heaven!
C. G. H. A.

Leaves from History

DIVORCE OF JOSEPHINE.

FROM A FORTHCOMING WORK BY REV. JOHN S. C. ABBOTT.

Napoleon had become very strongly attached to his little grandchild, the son of Hortense, and of his brother Louis, the King of Holland. The boy was extremely beautiful, and developed in those noble and spirited traits of character which delighted the Emperor. Napoleon had apparently determined to make this young Prince his heir. This was so generally the understanding, both in France and in Holland, that Josephine was quite at ease, and for some days again clustered upon her heart.

Early in the Spring of 1807, this child, upon whom such destinies were depending, then five years of age, was seized suddenly and violently with the croup, and in a few hours died. The blow fell upon the heart of Napoleon with appalling power. Deep as was her grief at the loss of the child, she was overwhelmed with uncontrollable anguish, in view of those fearful consequences, which she also clearly foresaw in complete plain. She knew that Napoleon loved her fondly. But she also knew the strength of his ambitions, and that he would make any sacrifice of his affections, which, in his view, would subserve the interests of his power and his glory. For three days she was secluded in her room, and was continually bathed in tears.

The sad intelligence was conveyed to Napoleon, when he was far from home, in the midst of Prussian campaign. He had been victorious in almost every battle. Victories were only to him more. He had gained accessions of power, such as in the wildest dreams of youth he had hardly imagined. All opposition to his sway was now apparently crushed. Napoleon had become the Potentate of Europe, and the proudest Courts of Europe were constrained to do his bidding. It was in an hour of exultation that the mournful tidings reached him. He sat down in silence, buried his face in his hands, and for a long time seemed absorbed in the most painful musings. He was heard mournfully and anxiously to repeat to himself, again and again, 'To whom shall I leave all this?' The struggle in his mind between his love for Josephine, and his ambitious designs, was fearful. It was a struggle between the head and heart, between reason and passion. Those weighty considerations urged an alliance with the Imperial House of Russia, but some advances were made to the Court of St. Petersburg, having in view a sister of the Emperor Alexander. It was at length decided that proposals should be made to the Court of Vienna, for Maria Louise, daughter of the Emperor of Austria.

At last the fatal day arrived for the announcement to Josephine. It was the last day of November, 1809. The Emperor and Empress dined at Fontainbleau alone. The scene to save her a pecuniary mind had been made known to her, on that day she had been in her usual spirits, even merry bitterly. As the dinner hour commenced, she halted her smiles upon her husband in tender affection. Napoleon did not dare to meet again her gaze. They sat down at the table in silence. Napoleon did not speak. Josephine could not trust her voice to utter a word. Neither of them even tasted food. Course after course was brought in, and removed untouched. A mental pantomime commenced the agonies of each heart. Napoleon, in his embarrassment, mechanically, and apparently unconsciously, took a knife, and striking the edge of his glass with his knife, while held in thought. A more melancholy knell was probably never witnessed. The attendants around the table caught the inference, and glided in noiseless silence. At last the ceremony of dinner was over, the attendants were dismissed, and Napoleon and Josephine were alone. After a moment of most painful silence passed, Josephine, pale as death, and trembling in every nerve, arose, and approached Josephine. She took her hand, and placing it upon his heart, said:

"Josephine! my own good Josephine! you know how I have loved you. It is to you alone that I owe the few moments of happiness I have known in this world. Josephine! my destiny is stronger than my will. My greatest affections must yield to the interests of France!"

Josephine's brain reeled; her blood ceased to circulate; she fainted, and fell lifeless upon the floor. Napoleon, alarmed, threw open the door of the saloon, and called for help. Attendants from the ante-room immediately entered. Napoleon took a taper from the mantel, and, uttering not a word, but pale and trembling, motioned to the Count de Beaumont to take the Empress in his arms. She was still unconscious of every thing, but began to murmur, in tones of anguish,

"Oh, no! you cannot surely do it! You would not kill me!"

The Emperor led the way through a dark passage to the private apartments which were connected to the apartment of the Empress. The agitation of Napoleon seemed now to increase. He uttered some incoherent sentences about a violent nervous attack; and finding the stairs too steep and narrow for the Count de Beaumont to bear the body of the helpless Josephine unassisted, he gave the light to an attendant, and, supporting her limbs himself, they reached the door of her bed-room. Napoleon, then dismissing his male attendants, and laying Josephine upon her bed, rang for her waiting-women. He hung over her with an expression of the most intense affection and anxiety, until she began to revive. But the moment consciousness seemed returning, he left the room. Napoleon did not even throw himself upon his bed that night. He paced the floor until the dawn of the morning. The royal surgeon, Corvisart, passed the night at the bedside of the Empress. Every hour the restless, yet unrelenting Emperor, called at her door to inquire concerning her situation.

"O, recovering from my swoon," says Josephine, "I perceived that Corvisart was in attendance, and my poor daughter, Hortense, weeping over me. No! no! I cannot describe the horror of my situation during that night. Even the interest he affected to take in my relief, only seemed to me additional cruelty! How long it was I do not know. I only remember that I was in the midst of my own thoughts and disposition, the children with whom it may please Providence to bless me. God knows what such a determination has cost my heart! but there is no sacrifice which I shrink from courage when it is required, to the happiness of my people. For three days I was under the influence of fever. Far from having any cause of complaint, I have nothing to say, but in praise of the attachment, and tenderness of my beloved wife. She has entertained fifteen years of my life, and the remembrance of them will be lasting as my heart. She was crowned by my hand, but she shall retain always the rank and title of Empress. Always all, let me never doubt my feelings in regard me but as her best and dearest friend."

Josephine, her eyes filled with tears, with a faltering voice, replied:

In response to all the sentiments of the Emperor, in consenting to the dissolution of a marriage which henceforth is an obstacle to the happiness of France, by declaring it of the first necessity of having one's own thoughts and disposition, the children with which